April 11 - May 2, 2010

Time | 11:00 am - 4:00 pm

Tuition | Four sessions $299

Learning how to paint an interior, a believable pictorial space, can be an art in itself as well as a forum into which any and all other genres of painting can be placed; such as the figure, still lives, and portraits.

We will begin by painting an unoccupied space, concentrating on the elements which make depicted space a compelling subject. After becoming familiar with constructing an uninhabited interior space, we will then compose an interior which is punctuated by the presence of a figure(s) and/or an object(s).

Learning Outcomes:

- Effectively depict volumetric space
- Accurately identify and transcribe light and represent the visual phenomenon that occurs as it spills over forms and passes through an environment
- Utilize and maintain a limited palette; using the colors which are the most essential and conducive to portraying an interior space
- Grasp and employ linear perspective
- Achieve atmospheric depth and solidity of form
